rtal The World Wide Web

The World Wide Web is defined as "a global ≡ hypertext system that uses the internet as its transport mechanism; the communication ≡ between Web clients (browsers) and Web servers is defined by the Hypertext Transport Protocol (HTTP)." // In a hypertext system, users navigate by clicking a hyperlink embedded in the current document; this action displays a second document in the ≡ same or a separate browser window. ~~Web~~ Web documents are created using HTML, a declarative markup language; advanced formatting is possible through ≡ the use of cascading style sheets (css), while interactivity can be achieved through the use of embedded scripts written in scripting languages such as Javascript. [Incorporating ~~set.~~ media (graphics, sounds, animations and video), ≡ the web has become the ideal medium for publishing information on the Internet.
